Message From The Director

While you are enjoying everything the West Michigan summer has to offer, it's also a perfect time to take in John Steuart Curry: Weathering the Storm, before it's gone on September 2.

This exhibition merits multiple visits, so don't forget to take advantage of a docent led tour for this once in a generation show. We are very grateful to the many lenders, underwriters, media partners, and other collaborators who have made this exhibition possible.

A great complimentary exhibition on display is Quilts: The Artistry of Home showcasing historical quilts from the special collections of Michigan State University.

As you may have noticed, the Muskegon Museum of Art Expansion Project continues to make fast progress. We remain on schedule for an early 2025 opening.

Please keep abreast of the MMA's communications in the coming months. We will be ramping up in anticipation of the new museum opening, as well as revealing an exciting new website and rebrand, along with the announcement of many opening events and celebrations.

The opening of the new MMA will include an exhibition in the new Van Kampen Boyer Molinari feature gallery of the extraordinary Bennett Collection, alongside major new acquisitions to the MMA's permanent collection.

We will also reveal a new specialized gallery for works on paper from the permanent collection which will be a permanent home to our Renaissance print collection, Edward S. Curtis photographs, Ansel Adams collection and much more. The historic wing of the museum will be completely reinstalled with more of the permanent collection, a glass gallery, and more.

We are on the verge of a new exciting era. Thank you for being on this journey with us and your support. We could not have achieved this without every one of you!

All the Best,

Kirk Hallman, Executive Director

JOHN STEUART CURRY
WEATHERING THE STORM

May 23 - September 2, 2024

PRESENTED BY: MIKE & KAY OLTHOFF

John Steuart Curry's The Tornado (Tornado Over Kansas) is one of the Muskegon Museum of Art's most recognized artworks and has become an icon of the American Midwest for audiences around the world. Appearing in over 30 exhibitions and 100 publications during its almost one hundred years of existence, The Tornado (Tornado Over Kansas) is a defining work of Curry's legacy.

John Steuart Curry: Weathering the Storm, explores Curry's legacy through his most famous paintings – including Baptism In Kansas, The Mississippi, The Bathers, and Old Folks – a stunning display accompanied by a deep exploration of his life, as told through archival images, personal letters, and historic records. Organized by the Muskegon Museum of Art in partnership with art historian Patricia Junker, this exhibition is the first major show on the artist in over two decades.

Major lenders include the Whitney Museum of American Art, The Cincinnati Art Museum, The Nelson-Atkins Museum of Art, The Saint Louis Art Museum, The Sheldon Museum of Art, The Syracuse University Art Museum, and Kiechel Fine Art (which represents the Curry estate).

95TH MICHIGAN CONTEMPORARY ART EXHIBITION

His work has appeared in local, regional, and national exhibitions and his short films have earned several awards. His paintings and films were included in the 2022-23 MMA curated exhibition Jonathan Thunder: Maamawi and the 2020-2021 exhibition The Art of People: Contemporary Anishinaabe Artists organized by the Muskegon Museum of Art and Grand Valley State University Art Gallery (with guest curator Jason Quigno).

Continuing the Hackley Legacy

Charles Hackley's great-grandson, Steve Hackley, and his wife Tammi stopped by the MMA in May while they were in town to honor the opening of the new Charles Hackley Middle School. Steve and Tammi had the chance to sign a beam in the new museum expansion, leaving behind a little bit of the Hackley legacy for the next generation of the MMA!

Behind the MMA Brand

Kristina Broughton, MMA Director of Marketing

For many years, the Muskegon Museum of Art has been coined the “hidden gem” and “best kept secret” of Muskegon. As much as we adore our local community in trying to keep us all to themselves, it’s time to let this best kept secret out!

With an expanding museum and many exciting things on the horizon for the MMA, we are growing beyond being a small town art museum and into a nationally recognized and respected destination spot for art and museum enthusiasts.

This time of change for the MMA has given us the opportunity to elevate the museum in many ways, some of which you may have already noticed (like our quarterly journals). As we inch closer to the opening of our museum expansion, we are going to be rolling out some exciting projects that the MMA team has been diligently working on behind the scenes. One of those projects is a rebrand. The word “rebrand” can be scary. However, we like to think of this project as a means to elevate and refresh our existing brand and to better position ourselves for the national stage and for the next generation of the MMA.

This September, the MMA will be launching a new logo and much needed new website, two major pieces of our rebrand project. We are so excited to share this project with you, but until then, we wanted to take a step back in time to appreciate the history of MMA logos.

Timeline:

1970

1980

Fun Fact:

In 1998 the MMA had a contest for the public to design a new logo for the museum. This logo was on the outside of the MMA until this year.

Robert Riggs (American, 1896-1970)
Chemical Plant, Wyandotte, Michigan
 Tempera on Renaissance panel, 1950
 Purchased in honor of the 100th Anniversary of the Muskegon
 Museum of Art through the 100th Anniversary Art Acquisition
 Fund and the Shaw and Betty Walker Fund 2012.6

Regionalism, an art movement that began in the 1930s, was characterized by its use of images of rural America. Thomas Hart Benton, John Steuart Curry, and Grant Wood were the best known of the Regionalists, a trinity created and marketed by Benton and dealer and gallerist Maynard Walker. Regionalist art was featured widely in publications of the time, including Time and Life magazines, and played a significant role in the art of the WPA through the 1940s before fading in the popular consciousness. Artists such as Robert Riggs adopted many of the elements of Regionalism, along with social realism and its more urban and industrial subject matter, in their own work.

Chemical Plant was commissioned by the Wyandotte Chemicals Company of Wyandotte, Michigan (near Detroit) for a 1950 advertisement headlined "Sphere of Influence." This painting, combining fine art and illustrative qualities, has a highly finished, dynamic presence that calls to mind the works of Wood and Benton. The small figures in the foreground and atop the sphere accent the massive scale of the chemical tank, a record of the industrial structures that had begun to transform the American countryside in the early 20th century.

Robert Riggs was born in Illinois. As a young man, he ran away to join the circus before settling into a more traditional art education. He studied at the James Milliken University in Illinois then briefly at the Art Students League before joining the Army for World War I. After the war, he studied at the Académie Julian in Paris and on his return to the U.S. settled in Philadelphia, where he worked for the ad agency N.W. Ayer & Sons. Like many artists of his day, including John Steuart Curry, Edward Hopper, John Sloan, and Reginald Marsh, his career began in commercial art. Riggs produced numerous paintings and lithographs for advertising firms and corporations, including paintings like Chemical Plant, Wyandotte, Michigan. Riggs became best known for his boxing and circus imagery and was highly regarded in his field, winning the Gold Medal for Excellence from the New York Art Directors Club for ten consecutive years and being named to both the Society of Illustrators' Hall of Fame and the National Academy of Design.

Chemical Plant, Wyandotte, Michigan appears alongside the works of other prominent Regionalist painters in our summer 2024 exhibition John Steuart Curry: Weathering the Storm.

HELP US CREATE

A New Public Sculpture Park

Sample Sculpture

By donating to the MMA's Patronicity Crowdfunding Campaign!

SCAN TO DONATE!
Deadline TBD

If we reach our goal of $50k in 3 months, the Michigan Economic Development Corporation will match with an additional $50k.

INSPIRING Creativity

AND CONNECTING Community

We are excited to announce our crowdfunding campaign with Patronicity to create a stunning Sculpture Plaza as part of our expansion project. Our goal is to inspire creativity and connect community through urban greenspace and art.

The initial plan for the immediate space outside the new museum entrance was simply for parking. A vision soon emerged for this space as a public sculpture plaza and urban greenspace connecting the museum to Muskegon's newly revitalized downtown.

The Sculpture Plaza will be a community space to pause, relax, and learn. It will inspire artistic expression, creativity and cultural exchange. With your support, we can come together as a community to invest in something meaningful that will last for generations to come -- a welcoming, inviting setting providing enjoyment and learning for our vibrant community.

Every donation, big or small, brings us closer to our goal. If you would like to join us on our journey as we create something truly special, please visit our crowdfunding page on Patronicity.

Thank you for your support
